Create and define one or more wallpaper profiles and have them automatically change every day, week, month, year, or whatever frequency you choose! Stamp and rotate pictures to create animated wallpapers! Featured in: Softpedia MacLife TUAW Fri, 29 Oct 2014 00:29:11 +0000wallchanger.info25126 at use is not the same as it was a few decades ago. We used to watch movies in the dark, sleep for ten hours, do our work in the office, and on our way home, we'd watch the evening news and unwind. Then, we played in the streets for hours, watched TV while doing our dishes, and when we were good, we'd get a drink in our coffee maker. Fast-forward to today, and it's a different story. We carry our phones everywhere, we work right in front of the screen, and we're always connected. We also have the tendency to pass hours in front of the TV, and if we're not watching, we're looking for some online content that'll entertain us. Still, it doesn't take much to find an application that will do the trick. In fact, there are many, and Wallchanger might be the one you're looking for. It's free, and it allows you to set any folder on your computer as a source of images that will populate the screen whenever you want. Start with a pre-defined profile The application is designed to show you a simple interface, which features four main components: A top window, where you can pick a folder containing your pictures, a preview pane, which features the current wallpaper, and two separate panels, one for the next picture, and another for a layout option. Before you start, there are a few options to pick. The first option is the one that will allow you to view the list of files in the folder you picked for your source, so you can make sure it's safe for use. Once that's done, the application
