A: I have yet to find a real problem with this issue, perhaps its your network. Try changing the properties for.webm to: Access the file properties from the file menu. By default, this will not open the properties window if you right-click on the file. Click the "Open Properties" from the file menu and then click the "Set" button in the form you're shown. This should set the file to "Always open.webm files with VSO Downloader". If that doesn't work, then follow the steps I typed in my answer here, which use the Windows registry. The "?" mark isn't part of the original answer. A: Turn off the "VSO Downloader" folder using "Control Panel" and try downloading the movie again. If the above doesnt work, try the following steps 1. disable "VSO Downloader" from Windows Start menu. 2. restart your Windows PC or run through the "Control Panel", run "Remote Desktop Services" and disable all the windows, give the "vso downloader pro crack patch activation code" folder to a different account. 3. try to download the movie again. 4. if the above steps didnt work, try to run the game with administrator privileges. Q: How can I add output from a query to a javascript-run function? I'm trying to convert some VB.Net code to pure javascript. I've run into a snag with the following code. The code is from the JavaScript JQuery Library (jquery-1.3.2.min.js): if( $('#x'+n).val()=='y' ) { return true; } The code is trying to determine if a value in a textbox is equal to y. It's in a function called onSubmit(event, task). I want to perform another function called UnsetNext(theValues[i]). Unfortunately, I'm getting an error. How can I make it so that the value in the textbox is assigned to the variable 'x' (variable being used in the if function)? UnsetNext(theValues[i]); // assigns variable 'x' with the value from the textbox // I want to add the output of 'UnsetNext(theValues[i]) 1cdb36666d

We run SignalR Hubs from our back end to listen for data changes, and queue updates to the client. However, currently, we have an app running in the ui, and we are taking data from its own server. I want to enable a new device to be monitored that is also connected to its own server, but I have found that the same signalR object is shared across all of our clients. How would I use two different signalR instances to achieve this. I have seen some posts here about this issue, and I want to take data from both, but the ui and the back end servers are on different machines. A: This can be done using IHubProtocol. This can be used to exchange data between clients. The idea is to have a class which inherits from IHubProtocol public class MySignalRProtocol : IHubProtocol { public Task SendMessageToServer(string message); } and then you would need an IHubServer which would use that protocol. (IHubProtocol does not have any methods for sending data to a client - i.e. it is really a transport protocol) public class MySignalRHub : Hub { public MySignalRProtocol _serverProtocol; public MySignalRProtocol GetServerProtocol() { return _serverProtocol; }
